not owe a gambling debt.

[redacted] stated that the only money he owes is money owed to banks and that he never engaged in the practice of borrowing money from private lenders and thereafter making extensive payments in order to offset the debt. [redacted] added that he understood what the term "juice" meant and indicated that he was not on "juice".

[redacted] stated that he did not receive any prior warning before the bombing incident nor did he receive any subsequent warning.

[redacted] added that about the same time that the bombing incident took place that several car windows [redacted] [redacted] were shot out. In this regard [redacted] added that he has received no warning nor has anyone made any demands on him.

[redacted] stated that he never knowingly associated or had business dealings with those who are considered to be

The investigation in this case was predicated upon receipt of information from [REDACTED] on 5/16/74 that ANNERINO [REDACTED] bombed a car import business at 6555 south Cocero, Chicago, Ill. Investigation determined that that on 2/4/74 a pipe bomb exploded at a rear door of the aforementioned business and caused $3,000.00 damage.

On 6/17/74 [REDACTED] of Classis Imports, 6555 south Cicero was interviewed by writer and he denied that he knew ANNERINO or that he owed anyone other than his bank any money. [REDACTED] also stated that he did not gamble and therefore did not owe any gambling debts. No information was developed during this interview which would indicate that an employee of Classis Imports was on juice or had a gambling debt. Photos of ANNERINO and his known associates were shown to employees of Classic Imports with negative results.

Inasmuch as all logical information in this case has been completed and no information has been developed that ANNERINO was responsible for the bombing it is recommended that this case be closed.
